IS A HUSBAND THE PERSONAL PROPERTY OF HIS WIFE

Interesting Case Argued Yesterday Before the Supreme Court of the United States.

By Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, April 7.—Whether a husband may be considered the "personal property" of his wife, and whether the "Blow-post law" of Georgia is constitutional are two of the questions at stake in the unique suit of Mrs. Josephine King, of Georgia, against the Southern Railway company, argued today before the supreme court of the United States. It comes up at a time when the only bachelor justice of the court, Justice Moody, is too ill to consider the case.

The suit is for damages, arising out of a railroad accident. In the autumn of 1903, Mrs. King, her husband, A. King, and her daughter, Miss Inez King, were riding along a country road in Georgia behind a mule. A high bank obscured the view of the tracks of the Southern Railway company just ahead of them. As the mule got squarely on the track a through passenger train from Washington to Atlanta struck it and the buggy, killing King, and injuring the wife and daughter. Mrs. King got damages in the state courts for injuries to her person. She also sued on the death of her husband. It is this suit which was argued here today before the supreme court.

In the lower court, the railroad company contended that the recovery in the state court for injuries to her person estopped Mrs. King from maintaining an action for the death of her husband.

The circuit court of appeals for the fifth circuit in passing on the judgment of Mrs. King for $3,250 for the death of her husband, considered the argument of the railroad.

"The contention is made that the injuries to the person of the wife and the loss occasioned by the death of her husband," said the court, "constitute a single cause of action and that separate actions will not lie. This contention appears to be seriously made, but in the practice and procedure of several states it would appear to be a legal novelty without law or precedent. If it be contended that the deceased husband was the 'personal property' of the plaintiff herein, then the contention would be supported by the decisions of every state court but one.

"Where injuries to the person and the physical property of the injured party occur out of the single tort, then, and in that event, the tort to the person and the property constitutes a single cause of action and as previously suggested the
